

Ensuring you hear from the best candidates

LawCareers.Net (www.lawcareers.net) is a comprehensive guide to Finding a graduate job in the legal profession. The site includes extensive content on how to look for a training contract, how to assess firms and yourself and where, when and how to apply. The site's directories of firms, chambers and law course providers feature over 1,250 organisations. The site averages over 10,000 visitors every day and LC.N Weekly, its email newsletter has over 18,000 subscribers (see <http://www.lawcareers.net/email/>).

One of LawCareers.Net's most popular sections is the Immediate Vacancies job board. The aim is to offer readers information on firms who need to recruit at short notice or who do not have an annual trainee intake but instead recruit on a more ad hoc basis. Placing an entry in the Immediate Vacancies section <http://www.lawcareers.net/ImmediateVacancies.aspx> costs nothing and you are invited, as the winners of an LSC Training Contract grant, to publicise your vacancy in this section free of charge. The publishers of LawCareers.Net are confident the Immediate Vacancies section will give the firm access to a large pool of talented potential trainees.

To place your vacancy on LawCareers.Net please mail Julia Browne at jbrowne@lawcareers.net. Please consult the immediate vacancies section (<http://www.lawcareers.net/ImmediateVacancies.aspx>) for an indication of what information should be included. We suggest the following as a minimum:

Firm Name
Job Title
Location
Brief job description
details of application procedure
Deadline for applications
Other information.

As confirmed under the terms of the Training Contract Grants Scheme, all advertisements must include the following statement:

'This training contract is sponsored by the Legal Services Commission Training Contract Grants Scheme 2008'

Please note you cannot include the firm's website address on the entry. This is available only to firms paying for enhanced entries. If you have any further questions please contact Julia or Matthew Broadbent on 020 7234 0606.
